It is expected that sales of reconditioned used cars would rise in light of the current challenging economic climate. Leasing cars rather than buying them entirely is a prevalent practise in the majority of the world's nations. A lease is a legally binding agreement between a buyer and a seller in which the buyer agrees to pay the seller/financier in fixed monthly or annual instalments. After the lease term is up, the buyer will have the option of purchasing the vehicle for its residual value, or anticipated resale value. Therefore, the ability for sellers and financiers to accurately anticipate the residual value of cars is of commercial relevance.
